

This document contains many examples of badly damaged salvage auction vehicles from a two week period that were offered for resale with title paperwork that allows for the vehicles to be 'repaired'. Many of these vehicles are completely incapable of being fixed. This allows for cars to be resold at the auction to buyers who will be buying the vehicles just for the paperwork. The paperwork can then be used to allow other cars to be stolen and counterfeit tags ordered and replaced allowing the stolen car to do a 'VIN clone or swap' (which is the equivalent of an identity theft for humans). In other cases it allows badly damaged cars to be repaired and resold to end consumers without proper disclosure and at personal risk to the new owner.

Badly wrecked cars which are bought for the paperwork can result in the auctions and the vehicle owners - including insurers - to get significant paybacks from the sales of these cars even if the cars have little intrinsic worth. In the Senate Transportation Committee, there was a request that include a mandatory 80% damage to used car value to require the mandatory branding of the vehicle as a non-repairable. This was not included in the final Senate version, and is a major failing of the proposed Senate bill. The House Insurance Committee then offered an amended bill that would further remove many other law enforcement and consumer safeguards from their version of SB 273.

This vehicle has a repairable salvage title although it is obviously not repairable. The claimed repair cost is greatly understated. Under the Senate SB 273 the insurance company who paid off the claim on this vehicle was hoped would include a requirement for a mandated non-repairable tile. The House Insurance Committee amendment went even further and would strip other critical law enforcement and consumer protections from the bill.

This vehicle from Progressive Insurance has a salvage title when it appears non-repairable. Under deliberations on the original SB 273, this loophole was asked to be closed requiring that this type of scrap vehicle be branded with a certificate of destruction or given a non-repairable title. The substitute House amendment did not include this requirement, thereby still allowing the practice of reselling such units in a way that allows for the purchase of the paperwork to cover thefts and clones to continue to take place. The House version also removed additional law enforcement and consumer safeguards that were in the Senate version of the bill.

This vehicle has an original Ohio title despite the damage to the front end of the car and the airbag deployment. This vehicle appears to require a salvage title if it is being sold under the salvage auction license by CoPart. This may be a private party sale - did it require a reclassification of the title branding before the sale?

If this unit is bought by an unscrupulous repairer and has the hood quickly swapped out, it could be resold over the Internet with the damage disguised and under the clean title to an unsuspecting consumer if the auctions were opened to the public on an 'as-is' 'where-is' basis.

This vehicle from Progressive Insurance has a repairable salvage title when it appears to be a non-repairable/ certificate of destruction vehicle. There is a biohazardous/chemical damage on the vehicle as well. Also note that no damage estimate appraisal seems to have been filed. While the Ohio Senate bill did not provide mandatory branding as non-repairable those units damaged to 80% of ACV, SB 273 would have made some of these practices more difficult to continue undiscovered. These protections would be stripped out by the House amendments introduced by the House Insurance Committee.

This burnt out vehicle from Progressive Casualty Insurance has a repairable salvage title. Note that there is no listed damage appraisal. All metal has been burnt and lost its temper - this vehicle cannot be repaired at any practical cost. The original Senate SB 273 language was hoped to have made this practice illegal. This was not corrected in the House version, and other protections are also being stripped out of the bill by the amendments from the House Insurance Committee.

This vehicle from Allstate Insurance has a repairable salvage title yet is clearly not repairable. The damage estimate is also not complete - there is no reasonable way a full estimate of damage could come to less than $5,000 for this damage. This vehicle would be mandated to get a non-repairable title under proposed language for the original Senate version of SB 273 which did not make it into the final version of the bill. This protection and many other critical law enforcement and consumer protections would be stripped out of the bill by the amendment proposed by the House Insurance Committee.

This vehicle has a repairable salvage title when it obviously is a non-repairable vehicle. The repair cost is listed at $4,287 yet it cannot be repaired at any conceivable price. This is an insurance vehicle according to the state records even though it is not listed as such on the auction site (Liberty Mutual). Under the original SB 273 Senate bill, this vehicle would have required the insurer to apply for a non-repairable title. That requirement did not make it into the final version of the Senate bill. This was not corrected in the House version, and many other law enforcement and consumer protections were also removed in the House Insurance Committee amendments.

This vehicle from Grange Insurance Co. has a salvage title but appears to be non-repairable due to the damage on both ends of the vehicle. Note the repair cost is more than three times greater than the ACV. This insurer has done a good faith estimate of damage, but is not mandated under current law to declare the vehicle as a non-repairable or certificate of destruction vehicle. SB 273 was hoped to have required the insurer to get a non-repairable title for this unit, but this protection did not make it into the final Senate bill, and other critical law enforcement and consumer protections would also be removed by the amendment proposed by the House Insurance Committee.

This vehicle from State Farm has an original Ohio title when it apparently should have a salvage title. The loss is listed as collision, and there is damage to the vehicle. The title shows State Farm yet the auction does not report the vehicle as State Farm and claims it is an original document without a brand or salvage title. The auction sells the units under an 'as-is, where-is' waiver from the bidders. There are multiple potential problems with this transaction, and SB 273 was hoped to have mandated that the vehicle get a non-repairable title. This was not corrected in the House version, and other law enforcement and consumer protections would be stripped out of the bill by the House Insurance Committee amendment.

This vehicle claims to have an original Ohio title but there is no recorded title for this VIN according to Ohio state. This vehicle appears that it should have a salvage title rather than a clean original title as noted on this auction site. It is an EAN Holdings vehicle. EAN Holdings is actually the parent of Enterprise/Alamo/National.

This vehicle has an original Ohio title when it apparently should have a salvage title. Under what license type was IAA reselling this vehicle? This vehicle is also apparently owned by EAN Holdings. EAN Holdings is Enterprise/Alamo/National - was this a rental car or lease car total loss accident vehicle being sold at auction under a clean title rather than having a salvage title?

This vehicle from American Family Insurance. It has a salvage title when it appears to be non-repairable. While not mandated under current law, American Family could voluntarily assign it a notation across the title 'for destruction' to reduce the possibility that the paperwork is reused to cover a purchase for VIN cloning? Under SB 273 it was hoped that this vehicle would have been required to get a non-repairable branding. That requirement did not make it into the final version of the Senate bill, and other law enforcement and consumer protections would be stripped out of the bill by amendment in the House Insurance Committee.

This GEICO vehicle has a salvage title but appears to be a non-repairable vehicle. The insurer could have marked the salvage title 'for destruction' on a voluntary basis. Pre-Bidding Closes 23h 27m Pre-bidding history

This vehicle from Motorist Insurance has a salvage title when it appears to be scrap. As a 2010 model year unit, this type of vehicle can be especially attractive to be purchased for the value of the paperwork. The Insurer could have voluntarily marked the title as 'for destruction', but apparently did not. It was hoped that Senate bill SB 273 would have mandated that this be given a non-repairable title, but this provision did not make it into the final Senate version. This was not corrected in the House version, and other law enforcement and consumer protections would also be stripped out of the bill by the House Insurance Committee version.

This vehicle from Progressive Casualty Insurance has a repairable salvage title. It clearly cannot be repaired. While the insurer could have written 'for destruction' on the salvage title, from the auction listing it appears the unit is being resold on a repairable salvage title basis. It was hoped that SB 273 would have mandated that this be given a non-repairable title. This was not corrected in the House version, and other law enforcement and consumer protections would also be stripped out of the bill by the House Insurance Committee through the current House amendment.

This vehicle from Motorist Mutual Insurance Co. has a repairable salvage title when it appears to be totally non-repairable. SB 273 was hoped to have required that this be given a non-repairable title. The House Insurance Committee is voting on an amendment that did not restore this as a requirement, and also strips many other important law enforcement and consumer protections from the bill.

This vehicle from Motorist Mutual Insurance Co. has a repairable salvage title when it appears to be a non-repairable vehicle. The insurer could have marked 'for destruction' on the face of the title on a voluntary basis, however the auction listing does not indicate that this took place. Under SB 273 it was hoped this would have mandated that the insurer apply for a non-repairable title, but the requirement did not make it into the final Senate version of the bill. This was not corrected in the House, and other law enforcement and consumer protections are also being stripped out of the bill by the House Insurance Committee amendment.

This vehicle from Erie Insurance Co. has a repairable salvage title when it appears to be a non-repairable vehicle. While it could have been marked by the insurer on the title 'for destruction only' on a voluntary basis, the auction site does not seem to indicate that this took place. SB 273 would have required the insurer to apply for a non-repairable title for this vehicle. That requirement and other important law enforcement and consumer protections would be removed based upon the amendment introduced by the House Insurance Committee.

This vehicle from GEICO was given a repairable salvage title. Additionally, note that according to CarFax there is a prior odometer reading of 62,000 as of 5/4/2012. As a 2012 vehicle, this is the type of vehicle that the paperwork is attractive for purchase to cover theft and VIN swap schemes. Under SB 273 this would be required to have a non-repairable title. The current House Insurance Committee amendment would remove this requirement and also strip out important law enforcement and consumer protections.

This vehicle from Permanent General Insurance has a salvage title when it appears to be unrepairable. While the insurer could voluntarily have marked the face of the title 'for destruction only' the auction listing does not indicate that the title has been marked for destruction. Under SB 273 it was hoped that this vehicle would have required a non-repairable title, but that did not make it into the final Senate language. The House Insurance Committee does not correct this, and has proposed an amendment to the bill that strips out other important law enforcement and consumer protections.

This vehicle from Allstate Insurance has a repairable salvage title when it looks like a non-repairable vehicle. This vehicle also has biohazard/chemical damage. While Allstate could have voluntarily marked the title 'for destruction' according to the paperwork it does not appear that this was done. Under the original Senate version of SB 273 it was hoped that this vehicle would have required a mandatory non-repairable title, but that did provision did not make it into the final version of the bill. The proposed House Insurance Committee amendment does not address this problem, and removes other very important important law enforcement and consumer protections from the bill.

This vehicle from Progressive Insurance has a salvage title when it appears to be a unrepairable. This vehicle also has biohazard/chemical damage. The posted listing shows no damage estimate. Was an estimate written? Was it complete and to company standards? Under the original Senate SB 273 it was hoped this vehicle would have required the insurer to get a non-repairable title for this vehicle. The current House Insurance Committee amendment does not correct this deficiency, and would strip this other important law enforcement and consumer protections from the bill.
